

International Financial Institutions and U.S. AID

I. Need to create a source of funds for rapid expansion of international investment (long-term) credit.

- A. Traditional role of the investment banking community. *
- B. Problem of sovereignty and the limitation of funds. *
- C. High cost of feasibility studies and their tendency to become lost or buried. *

limitations on exports + technology

II. Varying levels of bankability, or credit-worthiness. Hard window and soft-window investment functions.

- A. Convertible currencies -- loans must generate funds through exports or the replacement of hard currency imports.
- B. Local currencies -- loans must generate funds for direct (barter) exports or generate additional sustaining local output which will provide a basis for economic expansion but will take many years to generate the compensating export -- or import replacement -- capability in the domestic economy.
